LILJEHOLMENS
STEARINFABRIK

Life shines

At Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik we make candles. But not only. Moreover, we make sure to keep an old craft alive and devote energy to spreading light in a country where the winter is both long, dark, and cold.

But not only. Moreover, we make parties a little more festive and comfort those who feel sad. We speed up the romance and help keep it alive. We make people unwind. And emotions to bubble up. We get food to taste better and Christmas to become more enjoyable.

We make the summer evening brighter. And the winter night softer. We make the Friday coziness cozier and the weekend breakfast more luxurious. We make the conversations more intimate and the silence even more restful.

We make people forget. And people to remember. We make the candles even more beautiful. And life a little bit brighter. Even when it is dark.

About Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik

History

Embark on a captivating journey through Liljeholmens Stearinfabriks' history, tracing the introduction of stearin candles to Sweden, their evolution into a vital light source, and their role in shaping the ambiance of everyday life and celebratory moments.

In 1837, Lars Johan Hierta, an enterprising figure in Swedish media, discovered stearin candles in London. Enchanted by their smokeless, drip-free nature and the pleasant light they emitted, Hierta and chemist Johan Michaëlsen pioneered stearin production in Sweden. In 1839, Liljeholmens Tekniska Fabrik was born. The initial factory on Liljeholmen in Stockholm marked the inception, with candles initially sold from Aftonbladet's editorial office. By 1841, recognizing the need for expansion, the factory relocated to Danvikstull on the south side of Stockholm.

In the early 20th century, the widespread adoption of gas and electricity, coupled with advancements in kerosene lamps, led to a decline in the use of stearin candles as a primary source of light. Despite this shift, stearin candles continued to impart a festive ambiance to the Christmas dinner table. Facing this evolving landscape, Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik adapted to the changing market by diversifying its product range, including lubricating oil for the Swedish railway company.

However, the 1960s sparked a renaissance for candles due to renewed interest in using candles at home and in public places, leading to Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik opening a custom-made factory in the picturesque surroundings of Oskarshamn in 1970. Nestled amidst beautiful landscapes and with access to water, Oskarshamn proved to be the perfect location for our new factory. The dedicated and skilled workers in this idyllic setting have played an integral role in the continued success and excellence of Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik. This journey stands as a testament to Liljeholmens Stearinfabriks' resilience and commitment to crafting exceptional candles in harmony with both nature and craftsmanship.

Materials

At Liljeholmens Stearinfabrik, we welcome a sustainable future, anchored by our commitment to stearin, rapeseed wax, and shea stearin.

Our choices are founded on the substantial advantages of stearin and rapeseed wax over their paraffin and soy counterparts. Locally sourced and renewable, stearin and rapeseed wax not only boast a lower CO2 footprint but also seamlessly align with the principles of the EU Green Deal and Nordic eco-label standards, emerging as eco-friendly alternatives that effectively reduce carbon emissions, safeguard the rainforest, and contribute to a cleaner atmosphere.

Shea stearin, recently awarded the Nordic Eco-label, underscores our commitment to eco-friendly practices. As a renewable, plant-based addition, it aligns with our efforts to prioritize sustainable resources, ensuring that our products consistently meet the highest environmental standards.
